A stands for Arabian, with Neptune to guard;
All saddled and bridled, the pet of our yard.

B for the Bees, that fly out here and there,
And bring to the hives the sweet honey with care.

C for the Cows, in the shade of the trees
They are chewing the cud, and seem quite at their ease.

D for Ducks, swimming, and playing together;
They care not for rain nor the stormiest weather.

E for the Eggs, which we find in the nest;
They still feel quite warm, from the hen's downy breast.

F are the Fowls: the hens and the cocks.
Take care, my fine birdies, beware of the fox.

G is the Goat, with two kids young and gay;
They run to their mother, then scamper away.

H is the Horse. so sleek and so strong;
He draws the hay-cart to the meadow along.

I is the Island, where Johnny doth wish
To sit on the bank, in the summer, and fish.

K are the Kittens, that live in the stable;
They will catch all the mice as soon as they're able.

L is for Lucy, who waits at the stile,
And puts down the pail, for she's resting awhile.

M is the Milk, which is good, Pussy thinks,
And so, uninvited and slyly, she drinks.

N stands for the Nuts; and when lessons are done,
Two boys can go nutting much better than one.

O for the Owl, that prowling at night,
Steals chicks from our barn in the quiet moonlight.

P for some Pigs, which have strayed from their sty,
But of course will return there to bed by-and-by.

Q stands for the Quince I have plucked from a tree,
To flavor the tart Mary's making for me.

R for the Rabbits, white, spotted, and gray;
Just see how that little one nibbles away.

S for the Sheep, with their coats of soft wool;
They stand in the meadows so pleasant and cool.

T for the Turkey, who stately doth sail,
With long sweeping wings and a wide-spreading tail.

U stands for Ursula, and V for the Vine
That yields her fine clusters in harvesting time.

W for Wheat, and for Whitey, the Calf,
Who nibbles away at the grain and the chaff

X means on a Banknote, Ten Dollars, 'tis clear;
On a barrel, it stands for the strength of the beer.

Y stands for our Farm-yard, where chicks love to feed
On the oats, and the barley, and other good seed.

Z is for Zachary, shutting the gate;
So Good Night, little children; it's getting quite late.
